Overview
Students study a variety of topics in college, but the study of American politics is especially important because students approach the material as citizens as well as learners. As citizens, we are responsible for the health of our political system and it is critical that we evaluate it accurately and responsibly. Evaluation, however, can only take place with a solid understanding of the true nature of the political process and the institutions of American government. This understanding can be greatly aided by learning what political science has to say about our system.

This course introduces students to political science concepts, theories, and empirical findings in American politics. Topics include the context of the American political system (the Constitution, federalism, political culture, civil rights and liberties), the role of citizen demands (elections, political parties, interest groups), and the functioning of the major national institutions (Congress, presidency, bureaucracy, courts, as well as the media).

Course-Specific Learning Outcomes:

1. Describe the theoretical foundations of American government.
2. Summarize the role institutions, such as Congress, the Presidency and the Supreme Court, play in the American political system.
3. Explain how the actions of institutions are influenced by elections, political parties, interest groups, public opinion and the media.

University Studies Learning Outcomes:

1. Analyze social, economic, political, or cultural contexts and the ways they interact in the United States.
2. Analyze the ways in which race and other identities shape social conditions, economic standing, political power, or cultural norms and experiences in the United States.
3. Locate, analyze, summarize, paraphrase and synthesize material from a variety of sources.
4. Evaluate arguments made in support of different perspectives on US society.
How does this online course work? Basically, students’ primary responsibility will be to gather information about the topics from the textbook and the online activities, and then assimilate this knowledge through various learning activities. First, students read a chapter in the textbook and visit a website with an activity/video/reading/data. Then, students take a quiz, using their book as a reference, to help them master the chapter material. Next, student write a response to a question about the chapter. Students’ understanding of the material from the chapters will be assessed in a more comprehensive way during the exams. In addition, students complete an assignment focused on a political issue.

Required Texts

I am recommending the ebook version, which costs $40. If you feel strongly about having a printed version of the book, you may purchase that instead. The paperback version retails for $87.50 new and the ISBN for that version is 978-0-393-67967-0. The paperback comes with an ebook included.

Requirements

Your grade in the course is based on the number of points out of 1,000 that you earn on the following assignments.

Overview

- Quizzes (225 points)
- Exams (100 points each, 300 total)
- Chapter Response Discussions (225 points)
- Issue Assignment (250 points)

Details

Quizzes:

After reading the chapter and studying it, you will take a quiz that assesses how well you have mastered the material in the chapter. There is no time limit for the quizzes and you are encouraged to use your book to answer the questions. The purpose of the quizzes is to foster a very careful reading and studying of the chapters.

Exams:

There will be three exams during the semester. The purpose of the exams is to give you an opportunity to intensively review the material and therefore learn it more comprehensively. The exams will be a combination of multiple-choice and short answers. You will have a time limit of ninety minutes to complete the exams.

Chapter Response Discussions:

After reading the chapter, completing the online activity and taking the quiz, you will engage in a discussion that will ask you to respond to the chapter in some way. These discussions require you to analyze some of the material from the chapter while also articulating your own response and perspective on the topic. Appropriate responses should be one, maybe two, paragraphs long. Importantly, this component of the course requires you to read and evaluate your classmates’ responses. To get full credit, for each discussion you should post one original response and then you should comment on at least two other students’ posts.

Issue Assignment:
For this assignment, you will gain some basic research skills, conduct research on an issue, share that research with your peers, articulate the arguments about the issue in a pair of letters to an elected official that make the case for both sides of the issue and then evaluate both sets of arguments. The assignment directions will be posted on myCourses in a folder called Issue Assignment.

Your final grade is calculated based on the total points you earn:

Policies

Omnibus Policies
The University now has an online compilation (i.e., omnibus) of important policies relating to courses:

It is very important that you read through these policies; they contain information that you will be expected to know for this course.

Reaching Me
Without classroom or office contact, it is important that opportunities to discuss the course and the material with me be explicitly stated. You may email me at my regular address (droscoe@umassd.edu) or using the course email function anytime you like, and I will guarantee a response within 24 hours.

Late Penalties
Late issue assignment components will be penalized 10% points per day. Quizzes must be completed before the relevant exam, or no credit will be given. No late work of any type will be accepted after midnight on December 13. The exams are open for you to take over a multi-day period, so there really is no reason to take them late. However, if you do not take it in the allotted time period, special arrangements will have to be made and a 15% point late penalty will apply.
Academic Dishonesty in PSC 101

Because you will be completing your exams at home, you will be allowed to use your textbook as a reference (there’s no way to avoid it). Your ability to rely on the book is limited by the one-hour time limit on the exam, but it is not impossible to use it as a reference for some questions, and this is fine. However, for the short answer questions, the online format can create problems with academic dishonesty. Two pitfalls can occur because of this, one minor and one major. A minor problem occurs when students complete an answer by closely paraphrasing the information in the textbook regarding the relevant material. For instance, students simply read each sentence in a section and paraphrase each sentence in turn for their answer. This kind of answer, while not academically dishonest, is not a good demonstration of your learning and will not receive a good score. To avoid this problem, I strongly suggest you draft some talking points for each answer, either as bullet points or as an outline, and then close the book before writing your actual answer. You need to show that you understand and can explain your understanding of the material. Sentence-by-sentence (or point-by-point) paraphrasing is not the same as understanding.

The major problem occurs when material from the textbook (or another source) is put forward as your own writing without quotations or citations. I expect you to draw from the textbooks for your responses, so paraphrasing from the book does not require a citation. But, anytime you quote from the textbook in response to a question, you MUST indicate that the text is quoted by putting it in quotation marks. If you do not, it will be considered academic dishonesty. And, if you use information from an outside source, printed or online, quoted or paraphrased, you MUST indicate this in your response as well. Failure to indicate that you have quoted or used information from an outside source constitutes academic dishonesty. Copying and pasting from an internet source without putting that text in quotation marks and providing a citation is academic dishonesty. This is true for both the exams and the issue assignment. Students who engage in academic dishonesty will fail the course. If you have any doubts or questions about whether some action constitutes academic dishonesty, please ask me. Also, you must familiarize yourself with the UMD statement on academic ethical standards in the Student Handbook:

Schedule

The course is organized through a series of learning modules. Each learning module is associated with a topic and a related chapter in the ebook, along with an online activity/video/game/reading. Within the module, you will find the quiz and the chapter response question for that chapter. You will work through the learning modules in the order they are listed in the schedule and in the left-side menu in myCourses. Running parallel to the modules is the issue assignment, which will require you to complete several shorter sub-assignments at various due dates. These materials will be in a separate folder titled Issue Assignment.

The course is set up so that you have flexibility in the pace with which you work through the learning modules. The only requirement is that you complete the learning modules in each part before the related exam. That said, the chapter response discussions work best when people are posting and responding to one another, so be sure to check back on these discussion boards throughout the entire time period for each part, especially if you work ahead of schedule.

The exams will be open for you to take over a three-day period, as indicated in the schedule below. The exams are setup so that you have one hour to complete them, but you can begin them any time during the three-day window. Because of the time limitation, you will want to spend some time reviewing and studying before you begin.
